

Capitaine Train launches its Android app!

Paris, March 25th 2014

Following the release of its iOS app last October, Capitaine Train has launched its Android application today. Available for download in the Google Play Store, the app allows you to enjoy most of the website's features whilst benefitting from a 100% native Android experience. By publishing its new app on the Android platform, Capitaine Train has ended one of the last existing monopolies controlled by the rail industry giants.

Buy European train tickets

Capitaine Train is the very first independent distributor for train tickets in Europe. The app sells the tickets of SNCF and its low-cost subsidiaries (iDBUS, iDTGV), Eurostar, Thalys and Lyria. Deutsche Bahn and OUIGO tickets will be coming soon!

Access tickets in the palm of your hand

Every ticket purchased is stored directly in the app. The tickets can then be collected at the station, printed at home or stored automatically on a frequent traveller card. A notification is sent 20 minutes prior to departure with a complete summary of the trip: departure and arrival time, seat and carriage numbers ...

Save all of your personal details

Each user can create a passenger profile for themselves and their family and friends. They can quickly add discount and frequent traveller cards for all passengers, so the benefits start straight away. Every detail is synced between the website and the app so it's even possible to pre-book a ticket on the website and use the app to pay for it later.

About Capitaine Train:

With more than 200,000 users, Capitaine Train is the number one competitor of voyages-sncf.com. Founded in 2009 by Jean-Daniel Guyot, Valentin Surrel and Martin Ottenwaelter, it now has 22 employees and sells more than 1000 tickets per day. The company has one main goal: to offer a simple, intuitive and economic alternative to existing ticket booking services. They have raised €2.5M in 2013 and €1.4 in 2012 with Index Ventures and CM-CIC Capital Privé respectively. To be the best booking solution for buying European train tickets is Capitaine Train's greatest ambition.
